Reading List.

Most people think all learning happens in a vacuum.

When we think of learning, we picture a rigid school schedule, workbooks and structured lesson plans. That's not how it needs to be. Bettering yourself personally and growing professionally are your prerogative and yours alone.

That's what our company, UnCollege Gap Year, celebrates – blazing your own trail and developing a roadmap to learning what you want to learn). There's an arsenal of new tools to aid in your learning – the Internet, MOOCS, online communication tools, intensive hard-skills bootcamps – but a time-tested, logical, compelling book can also be a good place to start.

Here's a list of UnCollege's book recommendations for self-directed learners for the following categories:
